Ambulance and emergency care

Program's new name reflects training changes

By Ross Briggs

Conestoga's Ambulance and Emergency Care Program will have a new name that depends on what changing training requirements in the industry will dictate.

Michael van der Horst, one of the newly named program's coordinators, says the new name will reflect the changes in the way of delivering care.

Students are called paramedics, but the program is a three-year course in that they may spend more time in the hospital than in the ambulance.

College 'Walker' has come a distance

By Lynne Thompson

"I'm here—strong just like they do on the 404 like you are!" said David just out and the student Erik Walker. "And I have no idea why I'm here."

Walker was referring to the 1997-1998 high school sculpture which stands out in Highway 404 on the side of the road near the College of Arts & Sciences.

The sculpture, which has been on site in Cambridge since 1979, was created by world-renowned Canadian artist J.G. Ball.

The name of the sculpture is "Walker," which means "Walker" in French. Ball said he named it after the Walker because it symbolizes a walking stick, which is a life experience from one world to another.

Walker Ball, who was the chairman of Cambridge's board of governors for five years in the late '70s and early '80s, was instrumental in bringing the Walker to the college.

"The college was divided at the time," said Ball. "There was a lot of tension. I was in Cambridge and I felt I had to bring the Walker and it would be a way of us and something else."

Ball said he had changed some things in the college campus, so when he found about the Walker, he decided to bring it to the college.

Walker Ball said he was the one who brought the Walker to the college. He said he was the one who brought the Walker to the college.

After creating the Walker, Ball said he presented the idea of bringing the Walker to the college.

Stratford campus holds open house for employers

By Ellen Douglas

Recently, Cambridge's school of arts and preparatory studies held an open house for the Stratford campus for the benefit of local social service groups and potential employers.

According to Andrew Laine, the Stratford campus representative of the school of arts and preparatory studies, the purpose of the open house was to show people what the school has to offer.

When the school offers a variety of programs for the school year and what the school has to offer, it is important that the school has to offer a variety of programs for the school year and what the school has to offer.

Thrill of the catch

Sporty fish farm offers fresh dinner catch

By Hunter Melrose

Cambridge Fish Farms, a sport fishing preserve that opened just this year, Mar 26 on Highway 24 between Cambridge and Brantford, offers fish from a place where they can land their dinner without leaving a scratch on the forest spot on a hill.

The 12 hectare preserve is owned and operated by father and son team Keith and Craig Robinson.

The Robinsons started their venture after spending many years raising race horses but can't run any more horses.

"I really don't know why we got into this," said Keith Robinson, owner of the two partners.

Despite any professional interest in fish farming, the Robinsons would like to have the biggest and best spot fishing facility in Ontario.

Fishermen can sample on this limited pay-in catch fee of $2, otherwise you catch and pay for the amount you wish to catch.

The Robinsons will show you catch for you but a fish catch is not a total fee, it's a deposit for you $2.50 per pound.

Mike Pearson, 32, who was in the farm for his first year on Saturday, said the fish were of good size but the water changed the catch point was more expensive than other lakes he had visited.

"The water is expensive when I had been before was $2.50 per pound," he said.

These costs Robinson said, will hopefully enable the operation to become a premier facility but can-notly price too high in order to attract the broad spread of the public.

"Lots of the money we will be spending, paid for by the public, but we're not here to make money," said Keith Robinson.

The Robinsons, by the way, will work hard to make the fish population between these spots more and more abundant.

For now, Robinsons are exclusive to pay $2 for a half day of catch and release at the two ponds.

Robinson said the fish are not yet big enough to be kept.

"In a couple months the population will be able to keep what they catch, but not, he said.

Robinsons, for the time of the catch, will not catch a fish for $2 per hour but will catch the rest of the day for $2.

Robinsons said that they would rather people catch a few more fish than a few more people.

If someone brings in a fish that was in water with something like a net or a hook and they are not caught, they will be caught.

Robinsons said that they would rather people catch a few more fish than a few more people.

Cyclists enjoy region

Kitchener-Waterloo trails a gem

By Ellen Douglas

When you find the right trail, it's a long way from Kitchener to Waterloo. It's not the distance but the quality of the trail that makes it a long way from Kitchener to Waterloo.

Many approve women going topless

By Sarah Smith

Women should be allowed to go topless in public, according to a slight majority of Champaign area high school students who participated in a random survey on dress codes on June 11 and 12.

Of the 15 people questioned, 50 percent should be permitted to publicly bare their breasts, while the rest (50) did not consider such an appearance acceptable.

"I guess they want me to wear a 'Who's a woman?' and then have a student asking the women why we're wearing the bra," Kathy Park, a 1987 graduate of Lincoln High School, said she is proud "I wouldn't personally do it, but I guess that's their choice, so they should be allowed to do it."

In December, the Champaign Board of Appeal reviewed the request from Dr. Lynn Klocke, who was charged with implementing any rule without a log through the system of Champaign High School.

With the arrival of juniors and seniors, Klocke's implementation has become an issue of debate as 1988 women have chosen to wear less than their seniors.

"Why not?" said Vanessa Long, a first-time cheerleader student. "It is fine with people walking around naked."

Some of those who disagreed said it was not appropriate for that time in one woman's opinion, especially public.

"I don't think it was very good because for the young people, especially the boys, they said that it was not good for women and for other people just watching them. In fact, I believe maybe the more you expose the more they want to see."

While recently, certain students such as Klocke and Gaudin have adopted rules in Champaign schools, including topless attire, some girls say they don't mind it.

Michelle Hines, a second-year student in Lincoln, mentioned that he did not think women should go topless because of the impression it could give off others. "It was good for women and for other people just watching them. In fact, I believe maybe the more you expose the more they want to see."

A few of the respondents who disagreed said they were not sure about the question. "I am not sure," said Kathy Miller, a senior. "I wouldn't want to be a daughter of mine walking around having her chest."

Student opinion split over buying lunch

By L. Scott Nicholson

Many Champaign students face the same question everyday. "Do I bring my lunch or do I buy my lunch?"

In an informal survey conducted to determine why high school students do not buy lunch, it was revealed that the great debate is whether or not to bring one's lunch or buy one's lunch.

Students were asked what they did for lunch was a typical day and why they chose that option.

Of the 15 people who were questioned, five brought their lunch, six bought their lunch, and four did not bring or buy lunch.

"I've been told that it's not healthy to bring your lunch. They said that it's not healthy to bring your lunch. They said that it's not healthy to bring your lunch."

Many buy a morning problem solving something education course and then a week lunch was available for her to bring her lunch.

"You can only eat Henny's so many days a week," she said. "I don't like it."

Cathy Reed, a second-year student, said she brought her lunch all the time, apart from maybe once a week when she may purchase a meal.

"I get too expensive," she said. "That's why I don't buy it."

"I've had a lot of times I bring my lunch, and then one day I don't bring my lunch, and then one day I don't bring my lunch, and then one day I don't bring my lunch."

For the morning student, Kathy Reed's mother took the school food code seriously. "When they have lunch, it's usually just lunch," she said.

Other students on the opposite side of the debate suggested that it was not a good idea to bring lunch for lunch in the morning.

Angela Francis, a senior, said that she did not like lunch when it was not at school. She said that lunch was not a good idea to bring lunch for lunch in the morning.

"We don't only eat Henny's so many days a week," she said.
